Mr. Connor Barwin is the founder of the Make the World Better Foundation (MTWB), which aims to revitalize public spaces by promoting sustainability and community engagement. Our game plan has broken down Mr. Barwin's $500,000 investment into an offensive and defensive playbook.

To achieve his goals, we must:

- Generate a 12.3% compounded annual return to triple the principal by the end of the term.
- Funding payments towards his foundation with the dividend income of our portfolio.
- Prioritizing investments that match Mr. Barwin's values.

To work effectively with our client, we put ourselves in his cleats. Like a linebacker, we read the field and make the right decisions to keep Mr. Barwin's investments safe. His core values of community, respect, sustainability, and teamwork guide every investment decision we make.

Success in both football and investing requires a potent offense and a stout defense, directed by effective strategy. To achieve Mr. Barwin's demanding objective, we have decided not to invest in low-yielding assets and instead prioritize high-potential stocks that have historically yielded above our target. Our offensive playbook starts with large-cap companies, which we view as market veterans. They will make up 60-70% of the portfolio and provide the foundation for consistent growth and stability. We will judge these stocks through our proprietary quantitative index, which categorizes companies by sector and ranks their performance. This model analyzes performance metrics specific to each industry, ensuring we evaluate each sector individually and fairly. To assess our sector diversification, we will utilize our sector rotation prediction model to evaluate the performance and political trends of each industry.

ETFs, which will occupy roughly 10–20% of Mr. Barwin's portfolio, serve as our foundation for diversification. They allow us to maintain balanced exposure across sectors and asset classes while our quantitative models identify new opportunities in individual equities. This position offers us stability without compromising our growth potential. Layered on top of these core positions will be our small-cap and emerging market companies: our rising stars. These will make up 20-30% of the portfolio and will be where we take calculated shots downfield. Since small-cap companies require a different analysis approach, we've developed a particular quantitative model tailored to their financial structure and growth stage. With our strategy, we seek companies that create innovative technologies capable of revolutionizing their respective industries. From the end of year three onward, Mr. Barwin will withdraw $10,000 annually, funded directly from our portfolio's dividends.

Our Scouting Report ensures that each investment aligns with Mr. Barwin's values. We've built an AI-driven Community Impact Index that reads each company's 10-K filing and measures the frequency of language related to "community," "local," and "sustainability." The higher the score, the stronger the company's alignment with MTWB's mission. We are here to build a strategy that aligns with Mr. Barwin's values: a smart offense, a disciplined defense, and a shared goal - to carry 'Make the World Better' all the way to the end zone.
